<td>In The Old Man and the Sea, Santiago sets out to sea after eighty-four days without catching a fish. The stated journey is for Santiago to prove himself, he is an old man who people no longer believe is a “lucky” fisherman. Yet, on this journey, Santiago learns more about himself, his faith, and his inner strength than his ability to catch a fish (which he does), but in the end, the fish is eaten by sharks. This journey isn’t about the marlin be catches, but the lessons Santiago learns along the way.</td>
