For your summer reading assignment, you will read a book that tells the story of Hà, a ten-year-old girl who must flee Saigon with her family during the Vietnam War and seek refuge in the United States. For all 10 years of her life, Hà has only known Saigon: the thrills of its markets, the joy of its traditions, the warmth of her friends close by, and the beauty of her very own papaya tree. But now the Vietnam War has reached her home. Hà and her family are forced to flee as Saigon falls, and they board a ship headed toward hope. Author Thanhha Lai bases Hà’s story on her own childhood experiences and wrote this book as a series of first-person verse poems, each 1–3 pages in length, that span the course of a single year. The book is:

Inside Out and Back Again by Thanhha Lai
ISBN 978-0-06-196279-0

You will need a small marble composition book (college-ruled) to complete this assignment, and you will use this same notebook for journaling in class for the remainder of the school year.

This summer work will be collected on the first day back to school in September.

Task #1: Reading of the poem “Maps” & Journal

Read the poem, “Maps,” by Yesenia Montilla (see below).

In your composition journal label, number, and in your own handwriting, dedicate two pages to the poem by responding to each of the following:

1. Write down any interesting words or phrases
2. What do you notice about how the poem is structured?
3. List any questions you have after reading the poem. What do you wonder?
4. How do you think the poet/speaker feels about maps?
5. How do you think maps contribute to the way we understand the world?
6. How do you think maps are used to convey certain ideas about different places in the world?
7. The speaker of the poem outlines the disadvantages of maps. Do you think that maps and borders have any positive traits, or do you agree with the speaker? If you believe that maps have positive traits, what are they?
8. In the poem, the speaker is separated from someone they care about and this is made more painful because they are separated by lines on the map. Why is it painful to be separated from someone you care about? In your opinion, do the lines on maps physically and emotionally divide us from others?

Task #2: Inside Out and Back Again Reading & Notes

Students should read Lai’s novel over the summer and take notes in the book as they read. In addition to reading and taking notes, each student will keep a reading journal that charts his/her experience reading *Inside
Out and Back Again. Annotations (or notes in the margins) will be a focus of the class during the school year, so each student should practice them over the summer.

Annotations can take many forms but are mostly used to make observations about plot, characters, and major themes (Identity, Coming-of-Age, Language/Communication, or being an Outsider). Your book should look ‘worked in’. This summer, I want you to focus the notes you take on the protagonist and narrator, Hà.

What do we know about her character?
What pages and scenes feature important moments?
How does she change over the course of the novel?
In what ways is she an outsider?
What details inform readers about her identity? (In other words, what makes Hà, Hà?)
How is she different from those around her?

In addition to the notes focused on Hà, you should highlight, underline, and/or mark any passages that you find particularly important or significant. Then, write in the margins (marginalia), jot some notes about why you marked that passage.

Why is this scene or passage in the book so important, do you think?

Pay specific attention to scenes in which Hà feels or is treated like an outsider or telling you about her identity and family life. Be aware of the notes you are taking. By no means should the entire book be highlighted and/or underlined. You should be able to search your notes quickly during class discussions.

Task 3: Inside Out and Back Again Journal
In addition to reading and taking notes, each student will keep a reading journal that charts his/her experience reading Inside Out and Back Again. You will complete one journal entry for each of the sections listed below. It is highly suggested that you do not wait until after you have read the entire novel to complete your journal entries! You can break down the assignment into smaller chunks by reading one section and completing the assigned journal entry for that section.

Use the same marble composition notebook as the poem above and label all responses accordingly.

In your own handwriting, include the following for each of the sections noted below.

Yesenia Montilla
For Marcelo

Some maps have blue borders like the blue of your name or the tributary lacing of veins running through your father’s hands. & how the last time I saw you, you held me for so long I saw whole lifetimes flooding by me small tentacles reaching for both our faces. I wish maps would be without borders & that we belonged to no one & to everyone at once, what a world that would be. Or not a world maybe we would call it something more intrinsic like forgiving or something simplistic like river or dirt. & if I were to see you tomorrow & everyone you came from had disappeared I would weep with you & drown out any black lines that this earth allowed us to give it— because what is a map but a useless prison? We are all so lost & no naming of blank spaces can save us. & what is a map but the delusion of safety? The line drawn is always in the sand & folds on itself before we’re done making it.
& that line, there, south of el rio, how it dares to cover up the bodies, as though we would forget who died there & for what? As if we could forget that if you spin a globe & stop it with your finger you’ll land it on top of someone living, someone who was not expecting to be crushed by thirst—
